There's a tiny jazz club tucked away in the heart of the West Village called Arthur's, and as soon as you step inside, you are transported back in time. There are a lot of places like this scattered throughout the tri-state area, and I've always been attracted to them—old haunts in the city like Grand Central and St. Patrick's Cathedral in particular are fascinating to me, not only for the many stories they tell on their own but from my own experiences working on them. But that's a story for another day.

I'd love to meet a woman who is interested in stories and storytelling—someone who feels as comfortable in a museum as she does at a baseball game. Whenever possible, I love to take in a good concert (some of my favorites include U2 and Rolling Stones) and have added golf and paddle to my activities lately.

You'll never have to worry about me turning into a couch potato. In addition to tennis, running, skiing, and sailing, I put a lot of energy into being the best father I can to my two sons. Between being a teacher, soccer coach, and scout leader, it seems I'm always running after something! But it keeps me busy and my kids are at the age where they still think their dad is somewhat cool so I guess I should milk this for as long as I can 😊 Now that the cold winter has set in, I enjoy experimenting in the kitchen. I'm not a master chef by any means but I think food always tastes better when you cook it fresh yourself. Well, sometimes.

I hope you'll reach out to me if any of the following sounds like it could apply to you: you are a caring, honest, confident, and fun-loving woman who knows how to roll with the punches. You like the idea of dating but hate this online business. You wouldn't mind accompanying me to a comedy club one night. You are okay with the fact that while I might not be a big drinker, I enjoy a glass of scotch on occasion.

Thanks for stopping by and I wish you all the best with your online dating. Look forward to hearing from you!
